Objective:

As a former college athlete and coach, I have the drive and the passion to be the ultimate team player. Following my college coaching experience, I have decided to take my drive and passion to the tech world. I am currently expanding my degree in communications, experience with scoring programs and statistics into being a full stack developer. As a result of my experience in college athletics I know what it means to set goals, work to achieve those goals, and complete them. In addition, I have gathered the tools necessary to help encourage and motivate others to reach those goals so that the whole team can soar to new heights. I look forward to using my skills, passion and drive to strive for greatness into the tech world.
